

City of London Freeman's School Prize Day

The Thames Warden, Roger North, and his wife Christine represented the Company at the City of London Freeman's School Prize Day on Thursday 11 July 2013 in Ashted Park, Surrey.

The event was attended by a number of Livery Company Masters, Aldermen, Common Councilmen and the Board of Governors. The guests enjoyed an excellent lunch and afternoon tea, hosted by the Headmaster and were invited to attend a number of events including Junior and Senior concerts and school prize giving.

The Water Conservators donate each year to the City Corporation towards the pupil prizes. This year the Worshipful Company of Water Conservators' Senior school prize for Conservation was awarded to Emily Wilkes, a final year student. She was awarded the prize for her voluntary work with a local conservation group. Emily is hoping to go to Bristol University to read biology next year.

The guest speaker at the Junior School prize giving was Alderman Fiona Woolf CBE, The Senior Alderman below the chair. The Senior School prizes were presented by the Lord Mayor Locum Tenens Alderman Sir David Howard.
